Border Patrol Attacks Demonstrators as No Borders Camp Closes

indymedia.org – On the evening of November 11th, participants in the first No Borders Camp on the US-Mexico border dismantled the camp and marched west on either side of what has become a 15 foot wall dividing Mexicali (Mexico) and Calexico (United States), converging on the port of entry to protest the militarized border. The demonstration was peaceful until the US Border Patrol, without giving an order to disperse or other warning, brutally attacked those on the US side with point-blank rounds of pepper-spray pellets, batons, and swarm tactics leaving several badly injured. This event was the final action of the No Borders Camp, and came after a week of peaceful confrontation and resistance to the border system.

More than 500 people participated in the No Borders Camp during the week of November 7-11, with three being arrested.

Actions during the camp included a rally and a march on November 9 at the US immigration and Customs Enforcement detention facility in El Centro, CA and a memorial service November 10 at a cemetery in Holtville, CA where the remains of about 600 migrants who have died crossing the border are buried. All activities during the camp were peaceful and intended to build connections across borders.
