Police raid houses of New Zealand activists

More than 300 police, many armed, had swooped down simultaneously in several cities around New Zealand this past Monday, October 15th arresting 17 people and are still looking for about 60.

The raids were done under the post-9/11 Terrorism Suppression Act which has been widely criticized since it's legislation in 2002. Despite the pretense, no one has yet been charged under the act, but rather for under the Arms Act for possession of various firearms and ammunition.

Strike Bikes to begin production

The strike bikes, reported in Info Usurpa a few weeks back, began production Monday, October 22nd after an overwhelming response to the call for 1800 orders was placed.

The Nordhausen bicycle factory will now be producing the bicycles collectively without any bosses.
