:::News:::

About 60 supporters of former American Indian Movement warrior, John Graham, showed up at Vancouver's Supreme Court on the morning of May 17, 2007, to oppose the US government's attempt to extradite him on the charge of murdering fellow AIM member Anna Mae Pictou Aquash. Only some 50 supporters were able to actually sit in court because by the time they arrived it was full beyond seating capacity with other supporters as well as members of the corporate media. Graham turned himself over to court sheriffs in the morning, was held in a cell during proceedings and did not appear in court. The three judges reserved their decision and re-released Graham on bail and house arrest. For full article see: <http://friendsofgrassynarrows.com/item.php?721F>
